

A NINE-CENT TIME THURSDAY

On next Thursday we are going to have a NINE-CENT SALE. It will commence promptly at 8 o'clock in the morning. Perhaps we can surprise you with what a nickel and four pennies will buy—as much as a dime, fifteen cents or a quarter of a dollar at other times. Many of the lots are small. Of course there'll be a rush as soon as the sale is on, so come early. Bring this list.

GREEN MOUNTAIN BRAND

LARD

Did you ever try any of our Green Mountain Brand Lard? If you never did, you have not tried the best Lard on the market. We have added customers to our routes every day simply by their buying Lard at our place once and liking it so well that they kept buying that article there and gradually came to find out that the quality of everything we sell is in proportion to the quality of our Lard. We are the sole manufacturers of the Green Mountain Brand pork products. All our Lard is rendered in our own plant, which is kept as clean as can be, and is taken from native pork.

LONG COAT OF LIGHT CLOTH.

a light tint. These coats are elaborately braided and embroidered after the most intricate designs. The coat in most instances is cut down in the neck, although some of the coats have the high Napoleonic collar of embroidered velvet. The sleeves are short and puffy. Irregular edges characterize the newest entire dress, or insertion, and in using these on the new skirts there is no danger of cutting one's height in two, for the deeply ruffled edges of the lace are so cleverly arranged that its employment will add a semblance of height to even a petite wearer.

It makes one wish for summer just to take a peep at the lawns and gardens displayed on the shop counters.

The coat in the picture is a dainty spring model for a girl of eight or ten. It is carried out in a pale shade of cloth trimmed with lace insertion on the skirt and an inset of lace in the deep rolling collar. A ruffle of lace hangs at the wrist of the leg of mutton sleeve.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

Learn to live right. You'll be able to die all right.

Few men are often right, and no man is always right.

Be ashamed to allow your prejudices to dominate you.

One of the most difficult discoveries for any man to make is the fact that his own opinions are not always infallible.

Do your own thinking. Don't believe a thing because some great man has believed it. Every great man that has ever lived has made many mistakes. Sometimes the greater the man the greater his mistakes. Besides, no man is so very great.—Walter Hurt in Caturist.

The Testudo.

The "testudo" is used among the Romans when besieging a city was no doubt suggested by the shape and shell of the tortoise.
